

ULURU RENT MONEY COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

Traditional owners of Uluru have invested some of the money they receive from rent into setting up data and photo archives on their communities using the Ara Irititja system originally set up for Pitjantjatjara people.

The databases were recently placed in Imanpa, Docker River, Apatula and Mutitjulu and have been enthusiastically used.

The Uluru Rent Money Community Development Project has resulted in around $750,000 annually of the rent monies from Uluru-Kata Tjuta National Park (UKTNP) – leased on Aboriginal land – going towards targeted community development projects in that region. It has a number of other projects.

The Ara Irititja archives arrive...from top Docker River, Apatula and Imanpa
Bottom right: Imanpa resident Tanya Luckey and Ara Irititja coordinator Julia Burke