

Community Development

is the way the Central Land Council works with Aboriginal groups to build their knowledge and skills to manage their money for lasting community benefit.

What is Lasting Community Benefit?

Lasting

Projects that make life better, now and in the future.
Projects that keep making good changes after the money runs out.

Community

The whole group: young and old, men and women, especially the most vulnerable. Not individuals.
Supporting all the families, not just one or two.

Benefit

Good change, for example:

- Supporting Aboriginal self-determination and control,
- keeping language, country and culture strong,
- improving health, education, training,
- supporting employment and enterprise development.
